

£18,499 + £565 delivery

BAILEY PHOENIX 644

Kitchen storage is first rate for a compact caravan

- Bailey Phoenix models are akin to Unicorn and Pegasus in shape.
- Phoenix models have full-sized ovens and separate grills, whereas their Pursuit predecessors had combination grill-ovens. And the new models have four-burner hobs, compared with Pursuit's three.
- The single-axle 644 has the popular transverse-island-bed configuration with a full-width rear shower room that's in every manufacturer's line-up.
- The shower room has two towel hooks and a loop, a large mirror with a line of bright LEDs focusing from above, two cabinets and plenty of shelves.
- Kitchen storage is first-rate for a mid-sized caravan, with a large double-doored cabinet and wide cutlery drawer above.
- The hob has two covers, one glass and one above that, which matches the kitchen surface, increasing surface area before you start cooking. It also makes the kitchen look very neat and tidy.

- The fridge is opposite the hob, housed in a dresser that also accommodates the microwave, at a height that most caravanners will find to be convenient.
- Lighting runs above all of the top lockers. There are four mains sockets and USB charging ports in the bases of three of the four spotlights.
- The stylish and well-appointed Phoenix 644 is one of the lightest transverse island beds on the market, a key consideration for matching towing weights to towcars.
- The high-arching central front window and the practicality of the double hob cover are both key attractions of this new caravan, and the large volume of kitchen storage space makes this a strong contender for lengthy tours.

See our video review of this caravan online at caravan.ma/vanreviews

FACT FILE

- ›Berths 4
- ›Length
- ›Body 5.84m
- ›Overall 7.37m
- ›Width 2.21m
- ›Headroom 1.96m
- ›Heating Truma Combi
- ›Weight
- ›MIRO 1219kg
- ›MTPLM 1374kg

BAILEY CARAVANS
T 01179 665967
W baileyofofbristol.co.uk